Writer, Speaker, and Interfaith Minister

SEVERAL YEARS AGO, I was blessed to attend a presentation where Mercedes Kirkel channeled Mary Magdalene. There were perhaps 150 people gathered. Before the presentation began, Mary invited the audience to form a line, so she could briefly meet each person, tune in, and offer a short message specifically for that individual. The one-sentence message I received was not what I was expecting; it was infinitely deeper and more profound. I have never forgotten her words.

In this book, Magdalene Wisdom, the profundity of Mary's words continues. I have read and heard several women channeling Mary Magdalene over the years, and Mary's words, through Mercedes, feel very authentic to me. My intuition clearly tells me that this is the real deal.

I consider the ability to channel a spiritual gift, just like prophecy and healing. Channeling taps into the wisdom of those in spirit form. Of course, we always need to use discernment. We should never blindly accept what someone else says, whether those words come from a clergyman, a friend, or a spiritual channel. We need to always check in with our heart. Does the message ring
